A brief biography of the man who leads
Our K9
Unit and Training

Paul Stapleton began his career as a handler and worked his way through every position to become one of the top subject matter experts in the field. His development of innovative training methods for EDCT continues to be recognized by leaders in the working dog industry. He has designed our state-of-the-art training facility in Pennsylvania from the ground up, including the development of teaching techniques that have helped set the occupational safety and training standards which comply with USPCA and NAPWDA.

At SCS, he is responsible for the job performances of every team member and the administration of our training facility. His complete understanding of OSHA requirements helped design the protocols that meet organizational mandates. Teams are certified by independent master trainers on a regular basis. His background includes consultations with trainers from Auburn University's Canine Training Center.

Paul's accomplishments are many; He is experienced in the deployment of a vast number of innovative security services that include all those involving Maritime and Aviation security, as well as chemical, biological, and radiological threat detection. He is also an expert at evaluating special event and high-risk perimeter protection needs. His deployment of Explosive Detection Canine Teams (EDCT) has gained him the most notice however, and he is arguably the best in this category.

His education, certifications and professional affiliations are many. He has consulted with Auburn University, some of the foremost experts in the field of "working dogs", and has attended other training programs that include those from the FAA, OSHA, and the TSA. He is a member of 9 Professional and Fraternal organizations involving canines, explosives, and security of every type both nationally and internationally. His 10 certifications thus far include the United States Department of Justice, FEMA, NYPD, Department of Homeland Security, and OSHA to name just a few, and they are the reason that Paul Stapleton continues to be the most sought after name in a wide range of security categories.

He is an Explosive Detection Canine Team expert who has been in charge of the EDCT and x-ray capabilities at the Federal Complex in Manhattan courthouse and detention facility. This is the same complex where the highest threat-level terror suspects are held and tried. We are very happy to say that he is guiding our course here at Stapleton Cargo Screening.com.
